9349 bhāginī- f. 'sister' Mn., nihā-* f. Kathās. [J. Gonda AO xxi 23 supports derivation from BHĀGA-² 'vulva' (which, if it belongs to the 'crooked' or 'defective' word-groups of BHĀNGURĀ- or VAŅKA-², might with a variant bhāga- account for bhāginī-* ~ bhāginī-). But EWA ii 460 sees in it more prob. the feminine of bhāgin- as an expression of good wish — bhāgaḥ kantiṇām of RV. i 163, 8 — to an unwed sister (note that in NĪA. bhāginī- is usu. the younger sister). The transference of aspiration from the initial to the interior presents difficulty, unless as a conscious avoidance of similarity with bhāga-² 'vulva'. The argument in AO xxi 30 that no bhāginī-* is attested and that therefore the transference could have occurred only at the stage bhāṭṭī- is not conclusive that a form bhāginī-* never in fact existed between the age of Aśoka and the first emergence of Pk. bahinī-. It is significant that in BHĀGINĒYA- no such transference occurred. The new bahinī- belonged to the Centre, the older bhāṭṭī- remaining on the periphery in Dard., S., L., P., some WH. dialects, EA., Or., and Ko. — For distribution of SVĀSṚ- and BHĀGĪN- in NĪA. see AO xxi 27. — BHĀGĪN-]
